A storm was blowing. Giant waves crashed against the boat and rocked it from side to side. Stan thought that the boat would sink and he was frightened. He was on a fishing trip with his dad because Stan loved sea fishing. Earlier that day, he had caught a big fish. It was called a tuna fish and it was the biggest fish he had ever caught. His dad had helped him land it because the fish was so heavy. His dad had taken a photo of Stan and the fish. Stan had been having a great time until the storm came. Now it was time to leave and head for the safety of the harbour.

It seemed to take a long time to get home. It was going to be dark soon. Stan stood on deck with his dad. A small roof kept some of the rain off them but they were still soaking. It was hard to see where they were going but his dad knew what to do. He was a good sailor who understood the sea. He kept the little boat chugging through the big, rolling waves. His dad wasn't afraid of the storm. Not like Stan. He sang songs to make Stan feel better. The harbour eventually came into sight. Stan's dad steered the boat towards safety. Stan was glad to be home.
