

Friday 22nd January 2021

L.O: To learn to recognise and manage dares.

Success Criteria:

- To know what a dare is.
- To recognise a safe or unsafe dare.
- To create a cartoon strip for the story 'Egg Drop.'

What is a dare?

Sometimes dares can be fun; the ice bucket challenge is an example of a dare that, when carried out carefully, can be fun. In 2014 people around the world challenged each other to carry out the ice bucket challenge to raise money for ALS disability. Watch How the ALS ice bucket challenge started:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qgobbckOR-o>

The ice bucket challenge was an example of a dare that some people didn't manage carefully. Some people were hurt very badly; look at these photos where the dare went wrong.

What's happening in this photo? What will happen next? When the person took the dare, were they thinking about consequences?

What do you think will happen next in this photo? What should the person have done differently?

This teenager died after a suspected ice bucket challenge on the edge of a quarry. It is thought he did the challenge before jumping into the water.

Millions of people were dared to do the ice bucket challenge and the challenge went well and was funny. But some people did not manage those dares.

Listen to "Egg Drop" by Mini Grey <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4lxBq9nJkig>

We don't know why the egg decided to jump off the tower; was it a dare?

Create a cartoon strip for the story of Egg Drop showing the egg climbing the steps and convincing himself that he can do it. The last picture is the consequence. Use the template below.

Do you think that all dares are dangerous?

How do you know if a dare is safe?

What can we learn from the ice bucket photos?
