Below is a piece of text containing metaphors, can you highlight to show where they are?

Oh, my Goodness, this lesson is a recipe for disaster. The computers are not working! The computer technician has absolutely pulled the wool over all of our eyes. We thought he was a computer whizz! Anyway, we have hatched a magnificent plan to get this sorry situation sorted. We are going to shower the ICT man with gifts, and hopefully he will work overtime to bring our computers to life. The teachers would try to fix it themselves, but with their butter fingers that would never be a good idea and we could be left with lots of smashed screens.

I remember the last time that happened to Mr Smith. It was a bright winters morning, and a lovely blanket of snow had covered the grounds of school. We had all come into school as bright as buttons and smart as carrots ready to get on with our work, only to find out that was not possible. That ICT technician did not last too long around here, his name was made mud in the technology world!
